

Humpty Dumpty

Humpty Dumpty once sat on a wall,
Then Humpty Dumpty had a great fall,
Well, he really shouldn't have been there at all,
According to Health and Safety.

Humpty was sat on a wall made of bricks,
Just acting the fool and doing silly tricks,
Showing off to the girls with his stupid antics,
Ignoring Health and Safety.

When Humpty fell off he landed right on his head,
When the medics arrived, they thought he was dead,
But he opened one eye, looked up and he said,
"You'd best not tell Health and Safety!"

For months after Humpty's little disaster,
He was lay in hospital, covered in plaster,
"He's in bits," said a nurse, when somebody asked her,
"He keeps on about Health and Safety."

They put him together again, apart from one leg,
Which was slightly askew, and held on with a peg.
He had a bump on his bonce the size of an egg,
'Cus he ignored Health and Safety.

He saw an ad on TV which said, "Are you in pain?
Had an accident at work for which you're not to blame?"
So, he gave them a call, and put in a claim,
They sent a man from Health and Safety.

The bloke went to the wall and then had a fit,
Then asked, "Is that the place where you used to sit?"
Humpty said, "I fell off, was only there for a bit."
That didn't impress Health and Safety.

He then said to Humpty, "Now, can you tell me why,
You were sat on a wall that is plainly too high?
Without safety equipment, you're lucky you didn't die,
You shouldn't ignore Health and Safety."

He then said, "I'm sorry, your claim is rejected.
There's so many rules your wall sitting neglected."
Well, it wasn't much more than Humpty'd expected,
They are strict in Health and Safety.

And though Humpty still passes that wall now and then,
He has vowed he will not sit upon it again,
Not after the hassle from the 'H and S' men.
He's had enough of Health and Safety.

And now on the wall where once Humpty had sat,
They've put up a notice which tells people that -
'If you sit on this wall you must wear a hard hat.
Thank you. Health and Safety.'

© John (Mogs) Morris