

Stand and Deliver!

One stormy night the carriage shook
Screams were heard inside.
A gun to the head was all it took
To forget his wounded pride.

He handed over jewels and cash
To the shadowy figure outside.
In a heavy mask he cut a dash
He laughed until he cried.

You're very wise, Dick Turpin said
Now go along your way.
It's so much wiser than being dead
He heard a lady say.

Well you seem to be a plucky wench
Perhaps you'll come with me.
I'll lead you such a merry dance
And happy we shall be.

The lady looked at her aged spouse
All wrinkled, past his prime.
She said as quietly as a mouse
Yes, I think it's time.

I married him for his money
And love him I do not
You look as sweet as honey
And I have to say damn hot!

These jewels will make us rich
Dear lady, Turpin said
Let's leave him in this ditch
And I'll take you to my bed.

The lady never did return
But crime it doesn't pay
They hanged Dick Turpin at Tyburn
And his lady, so they say.
